SMITH PUTS FINAL TOUCHES ON TALK

Newark Will Be Last Appearance Outside New York

New York Oct 31—Poised carefully guarded notes at the Biltmore hotel Gov Al Smith today was putting the final touches on the speech he will deliver tonight at Newark in his last appearance of the campaign outside his own New York

Smith is calmly confident of the outcome With nearly 12000 miles of campaigning behind him marked by demonstrations the like of which never before have been witnessed in a presidential campaign the governor feels the tide is fast drifting his way and that by next Tuesday the election will be in the bag for the Democrats

He will go to New Jersey convinced he can win the states 18 electoral votes Democratic leaders of New Jersey, who previously have admitted during the last 10 days that they were a little worried over the outlook for the national ticket now feel that Smith's appearance in Newark tonight will be the means of putting the state in the Democratic column

Labor prohibition and probably an other sharp pit intolerance are expected to be the high spots in Smith's speech at Newark

Witches Will Reign in Marion Tonight as Cauldron Boils Over and Sends Forth Spirits of Hallowe'en

City To Be Transformed in Annual Festival and Frolic Program

WITCHES are lowering over ... of Marion From the ... inaccessible fastnesses of the ... (by mountains they have ...) descend upon the city on ... "All Hallows eve," more ... familiarly known as Hallowe'en. Deep in their hidden lairs they ... tended their ... and sang their ... that will transform Marion tonight.

"Stir, stir about, while I begin the charm" they sang, repeating the direful incantation from "Macbeth." "Black spirits and white, red spirits and gray, mingle, mingle, mingle you that mingle may! Toby, Tiffin, Leep it still in! Firedrake Puckey, make it lucky! Hard, Robin, you must bob in. Round around, around, about, about! All ill come running in; all good keep out!"

Over their cauldron of evil portent they sang that song as the flames leaped and fell. To the potion already filled with many materials of fearful and sinister construction they added blood from bats, lizard's bane, fi ... from toads, oil from adders, and three ounces of red hair I wench last night.

Start at Nightfall

Tonight as the sun sinks be ... low the western horizon and its last ray of light flickers and leaves the world in darkness, the cauldron will boil over and its contents will drop from the dark, threatening clouds and launch the city. Men and women, boys and girls will lose their natural shapes and take those of goblins as the witches enter them.

When the citizens of Marion arise Thursday morning, evidence of the witches' evil work will be seen everywhere. Gates will be taken from their hinges and hung in trees, ash cans will be rummaged and their contents strewn over porches. Automobile tires will be flat and valve cores gone. As the potion in the witches' cauldron boils over, it will descend upon the windows of the city and cover them with an opaque film difficult to remove.

But things are not as they were. In days gone by men were more superstitious and either slept too soundly to hear the witches as they did their evil work or feared to risk the possibility of being themselves permanently transformed by defending their possessions. When the witches went unmolested.

The Morning After

In those days of yore things were terrible then say they will be seen Thursday morning resulted from the witches' ride. Wagons were carried loadly to the roofs of tall buildings by the magic contained in the cauldron's bewitching brew. Livestock was placed in Edifices. Small buildings were torn from their foundations and towed many leagues. Street car rails were covered with the witches' potion so that trolleys could not ascend the grades about the city.

But look about you as you come out of your home Thursday morning and compare the witches' work of today and think back upon the days when you were young.

The witches were more powerful then and you will be forced to say: "Things aren't what they used to be!"

Nutrition Service Is One of Important Branches In Marion Red Cross Work

Records Show Children Greatly Benefited by Food Supervision; More Than 128,000 Aided Throughout Country by Organization

The nutrition service of the American Red Cross has reached more than 128,000 persons in the United States during the most year just closed, figures taken from the annual report of the organization which was received here Monday by Miss Mae Hart E. Dowd, secretary of the Marion County Red Cross chapter, show.

Four Ohio Red Cross chapters have carried on nutrition work during the 12 months extending from Nov. 11, 1927 to Nov. 11, 1928 and have served more than 1,500 persons.

The Marion County Red Cross chapter has had nutrition classes in the Glenwood and Silver st. schools during part of the last year and has served more than 150 different children in these classes.

During the two and a half months that 70 children were enrolled in such a class at the Glenwood school a gain of 191¼ pounds was shown for the entire class. One child gained seven pounds.

At the Silver st. school 50 children enrolled in a nutrition class for two and a half months, gained a total of 117½ pounds. The highest individual gain reported was 15 pounds. At other cases of 20 children who lost for one month, but figures relating to the results obtained in this class were not recorded.

The nutrition service is not meant to feed children who are not obtaining sufficient food, but to give children those foods that nourish their bodies most effectually. When parents of children are able to pay, they are charged 10 cents a week for the service. The classes were largely financed by local club women and philanthropic organizations.

Principals J. C. Emmons of the Silver st. school and Mrs. Anne Smith-Clark of the Glenwood school stated that the improvement in the children in the nutrition classes was so apparent that it could be easily seen and that they were greatly in favor of such work being continued here.

The importance of nutrition in any effort to raise the health standards of the nation, Red Cross workers point out, is evident from the fact that while practically all American families spend sufficient money on foods to adequately nourish their families, nevertheless not less than 30 per cent of all Americans are undernourished.

Interest in the subject is growing rapidly in this country and abroad, they say, pointing to the fact that during the year the report covers, 20 of the 48 states were served by their nutritionists, with from one to 10 American Red Cross chapters in each of those states carrying on this activity.

In classes for men and women, and especially in the school rooms, instruction in "What To Eat for Health" is being given in an effort to correct and prevent physical defects resulting in whole or in part from malnutrition. Among these are defective eyes, bad teeth, impaired hearing, rickets, and especially vitality and increased susceptibility to diseases. The number of children reached with this instruction during the year totaled 122,856, while the other 6,226 instructed were adults.

The Red Cross nutritionists have also during the year made 3,215 visits to homes, held more than 7,700 office consultations and clinics, and given nearly 3,600 talks on nutrition. These talks were attended by more than 83,000 persons.

WHEN BACK HURTS FLUSH OUT KIDNEYS

Drink Lots of Good Water All Day, Also Take Salts Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grams of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water — you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

a ction given by two ships which sighted the Zeppelin approximately 700 miles southwest of Eastnet, Ireland at 7 15 p m (E S T) last night the Zeppelin should reach the coast of France before noon if it continues on an eastward course

Should the Zeppelin encounter bad weather, experts here stated it could probably would head for the Bay of Biscay and then head northward over southern France Otherwise it was regarded likely the Zeppelin might be headed slightly farther north to pass over London and then possibly going south over Paris

Because of heavy fogs over northern Germany there appeared to be little likelihood that the ship would pass over Berlin before heading to its hangar

Thanksgiving.

President Coolidge's proclamation setting aside Thursday November 29, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer in keeping with the traditional custom of the people of the land brings to attention the fact that never before in the nation's history have the people had so much for which they may rejoice and be thankful

In the last few years an era of national prosperity has swept the nation Industries have expanded creating more work for the land and die Wages have kept pace with industrial expansion Hours of labor have been reduced until a man has time for other things than his daily grind Home owning has become a prime requisite, and wherever there are home owners there one will find contentment and satisfied men and women

Mr Coolidge's proclamation directs attention to the abundance which has been the good fortune of the nation during the last year Crops never were better, and because of this reason coupled with the fact of ample employment good wages and a general condition of good health on every hand the people of the United States have much for which they may return thanks to the Almighty on Thanksgiving day

Thanksgiving day this year will be the occasion for more real rejoicing than on any similar day in recent years despite the fact that the trend of national prosperity set in some eight years ago and has gone forward without interruption In Mr Coolidge's language, through divine inspiration we have been imbued with high ideals which have operated for the benefit of the world and the promotion of brotherhood of man through peace and good will Through His divine favor peace and tranquility have reigned throughout the land He has protected our country as a whole against pestilence and disaster and has directed us in the way of national prosperity

A Splendid Achievement.

[illegible] Parker Gilbert [illegible] American effort to have chief executor of the Dawes plan at work on bond [illegible] York watchers It was a tribute to all who keep in touch with the ups of the day that he is a real man If there ever was doubt of this before it must have been removed by the manner in which he brought Great Britain and France into accord finally in an essential agreement in the matter of the debts owed to them by Germany and the ultimate freeing of Germany from the control of her one time enemies It was a great achievement one which many diplomats have essayed only to meet with failure It marks Gilbert as a real diplomat as well as a man of character and force and European diplomats have not been slow in giving his personal triumph the tribute it deserves

It has been revealed that the sudden week end visit paid by the British chancellor of exchequer, Winston Churchill on Premier Poincare of France was the result of the effort of Gilbert The young American is said to have found the British financial chief far from enthusiastic for the plan proposed by him Churchill was not actually hostile to it but he was utterly apathetic and hopeless of any practical result of an attempt to get France to come to any terms which Germany could meet However, such was the enthusiasm of Gilbert and so strong his presentation of the worth of the goods he had to sell that Churchill went to Paris with the result which has been published to the world Gilbert went to Germany to report to Chancellor Herman Mueller the outcome of the Paris conference and Churchill returned to London to report to Prime Minister Baldwin that all the obstacles in the way of an agreement between Great Britain and France on the subject of the German debt, which had been multiplying for two years and seemingly had made the situation hopeless had been wiped away and that the way had been made clear for arriving at fixed terms whereby Germany might know the exact amount she would have to pay to liquidate her debt and free the Rhineland from allied soldiery

And thus again we have an illustration of the immense superiority of present day American diplomacy over that which has no long been practiced in the Old world Former Ambassador to Spain Alexander Moore used it to good advantage in Spain turning a country unfriendly to us into an outspoken friend Charles G Dawes used it effectively in bringing about the acceptance of his reparations plan And now Seymour Parker Gilbert has applied it successfully to the solving of a problem which threatened to go years without solution

And when all is said what is there in this new form of American diplomacy which has enabled those utilizing it to achieve as they have? Nothing more when it is sifted down to its essentials than the application of the same policy which two honorable business men would apply to the solution of a problem in which they might become involved and for which there was a mutual seeking of a way out—the policy of frankness and honesty the spreading out of their cards upon the table that each might see the other's side of it and arrive at an understanding mutually agreeable

Each of the three Americans named achieved as he did without any brass band effects None of them was given to high-sounding utterances None of them made advance statements for publication None sought to win the public either here at home or abroad, to his view to get the force of public opinion behind him None attempted to try his case to the public If we may be permitted to use that phrase, but each of them was content to await his day in court And the results attained by the three demonstrate the excellence of the policy pursued

Supervise Child's Appetite.

BY ROYAL S COPELAND, M D

School children must be watched and directed in their eating They are at an age when habits are easily formed They are at an age when the foundations of permanent health or ill health are laid

You see the child at breakfast and at the evening meal If he carries his lunch, or eats many school at noon you can not be sure how he eats or what he eats

Sometimes the day begins with such a rush that breakfast is a hurried and unsatisfactory meal It may be killed indeed, consisting too often of a snack that can not provide the nourishment heat and energy required by that growing body

We are apt to think that a child's digestion is set to any sort of feeding This is not the case Many a youngster is really a chronic dyspeptic He is undernourished fails to develop and is the ready victim of contagious disease

Well selected food well balanced meals proper quantities of this and that—all these are even more important to this developing child than they are to the stunted adult With all this life before him it is up to us to overlook anything that can help to fit him for his career

I know the loving heart of motherhood and the earnest desire to do everything possible for the child It is not from lack of devotion that any child is poorly fed But many a mother has a flock of children to look after and a multitude of household cares Worries without end may cause her to overlook the child's eating

I want to emphasize the absolute importance of supervising the eating practices of the growing boy and girl No matter how pressing other matters may be this can not be neglected There may be disorder in the household but there must not be disorder in the stomach That organ must be looked after no matter what happens to the housekeeping

If the child is properly fed the appetite will be good If there is failure of appetite it means that the food is poorly chosen is improperly cooked to the sturdy adult With all his life behind in the meals is insufficiently or too freely taken or else that failure of regularity and system in the feeding have upset the stomach and damaged the appetite

A normal child gets up hungry enjoys the breakfast is eager for play usually active and noisy hungry at noon full of energy all the afternoon and ready for a big meal at night When appetite fails you must seek the cause Listlessness between times and indifference at meals are danger signals

Please do not be unduly alarmed I am not speaking of these things to frighten you but to make clear the importance of right foods and right eating

On another occasion we can discuss the particular foods that are essential to the well being of the child At this time I am content if I have set you to thinking about the eating habits of your child

What a person is and what he can do what he will be in future depend on what he eats every day of his life

Editorial Opinion..

PURSUED BY A NEMESIS

For an application of the irony of fate on a Homeric scale consider the case of Dr Frederick A Cook Here is a gentleman who was so avid of fame that he succeeded in making his name known throughout the civilized world but hardly as he had planned It was as if he had made a deal with the devil for the rapt attention of mankind and had been rewarded with overflowing measure For, as the fruit of his solitude not only did he become as he had hoped, one of the best known mountain climbers and Arctic explorers of his generation but as its most famous charlatan as well His exploits were the gossip of both hemispheres his name became a universal symbol songs were written about him and sung in countless languages including the Scandinavian the mother tongue of the king of Denmark In giving him what he had bargained for and so much more Mephistopheles must have become hoarse with laughter and Clotho I guess and Atropos goggle eyed with admiration of their subtle handiwork

From his too successful bid for fame Dr Cook turned to a hunt for fortune The 'discoverer of the North pole' became the discoverer of oil and published his latest findings to the world with the same old careless ness of proved facts But this time it was something more than the golden key to the city of New York that was at stake—namely the savings of the people So he landed in Leavenworth and his discoveries were sold under the hammer for such paltry sums as might be realized from the disillusioned It seemed like the end of the chapter and yet in all the annals of fame ment behind prison walls title appears to have had in store for him his bitterest pill of all The oil wells which produced for him nothing, but a basket of stock certificates which he unloaded on the unwary are now said to be worth millions Surely mortal man was never before made to drink such a cup to the lees The extent of his torture almost restores to him his dignity —New York Herald Tribune

ADVICE TO THE SINGLE SUITED

Change your clothes and lengthen your life So says the head of a concern which is among the leaders in the manufacture of garments for men The advice is not properly to be regarded as inspired by a desire to sell more clothing That an intelligent self interest has behind it may be assumed but apart from that there is sound sense in the plea for a larger wardrobe as an aid to length of days

This bit of good advice is intended primarily for the man who owns a single suit of business clothes perhaps with an extra pair of trousers and some ancient garments preserved for wear while tinkering with the car or working in the garden There are millions of him He is told that germs and bacteria which are everywhere in the air find lodgment in the pores of his clothes A suit worn six days a week is a happy hunting ground for germs That worn alternately with another suit given a rest and an airing during which it is well brushed there is death for germs instead of potential death for the wearer

Two suits at a time not only tend to lengthen life in the manner described but they also promote thrift The price of the second suit may in the end fatten the savings account Each of two suits worn alternately it is plain enough to see, will wear longer than one suit worn day after day This suggests an interesting development in economics If the multitude with but a single suit apiece were to be speedily converted to the two suit standard there would of course be sudden upturns in the manufacture of clothing But with millions owning two suits where but one was owned before and each suit wearing longer than its predecessor there would ultimately be a slackening in the demand Looking at it in that light it appears that the clothing manufacturer who offers this good advice to the single suited is as generally as a philanthropist and a lover of his fellow man —Boston Transcript

New York Oct 31 — Workers occupying humble posts in New York do not fare so badly The Cinderella theme is especially pronounced among those who minister to the personal wants of wealthy employers—that is the servant class During the past year more than 100 have been substantially remembered in wills

A hotel barber was recently asked by a customer he had shaved for years to meet him after he had finished work for the day He was driven to a suburb where a completely furnished seven room house was turned over to him as a gift

Wall Street financial houses are especially thoughtful in caring for employes passing the age of usefulness Many such houses pension off servitors on full salaries Valets to millionaires and maids to their wives frequently achieve old age independence

There is a quality to personal service that cements a bond between employer and servant They become members of the family and when no longer able to serve live on in the household in comfort Scores of ancient coachmen are retained in this fashion

In a midtown skyscraper there was an alert elevator operator who had a perpetual smile daily for hurrying tenants He became known as 'Smiling Bob' It was learned that due to a bronchial affliction he was trying to find employment in the open air

Today he owns many broad acres in Missouri, completely paid for and a present from those he had shown courtesy

A pleasant-mannered manicure girl in a hotel patronized by theatrical people was permanently disabled in a street accident,

Her customers circulated a petition and raised $3 200 which was used to purchase a ten room and her income is triple that of her manicure post These are a few of the innumerable instances to show New York generously aids those who serve them well

Life and the Cosmic Rays.

BY GARRETT P SERVISS.

Are the cosmic rays,' now so much talked about in popular as well as scientific circles, something hitherto unknown for the reason that they have but recently come into existence? Can they be forerunners of some stupendous change coming over the universe —some kind of specific—which, when it is consummated will wipe us out of existence in the twinkling of an eye? In short, is this discovery one of those foreboding signs' of the last day," so fearfully depicted in Scriptural prophecy? And has science thus unwittingly become a witness for revelation"

Such ideas as these have manifestly been lurking of late in the minds of some preachers and gaining a little credit among their congregations It may be worth while to point out what science itself has to say To be sure this strange, marvellously penetrating radiation, which seems to rain down out of open space still is too mysteriously 'cosmic' to afford much clue to its origin. The inhabitants of the earth have no consciousness, or no sensual evidence, of its existence The eye can not see, nor the hand feel it It does not produce any effects perceptible in any of the processes or activities of life It is only detectable by refined and difficult scientific methods of investigation

Yet they show that this radiation is powerful enough to pass through eighteen feet of solid lead It must pass through us, but we are evidently too coarse," or too insensitive, to be affected by the passage Through our eyes we are affected by the radiant light of the stars and with delicate instruments we detect their heat radiation, but we can not say that they produce any general physiological effect upon us Now, the total energy coming to the earth in the cosmic rays, according to Dr Millikan, is only about one-tenth of that coming in the light and heat of all the stars, our own star the sun, being excluded because on account of its proximity it stands in a class by itself So, notwithstanding the tremendous penetrating power of the cosmic radiation we see that its effective energy is from our point of view, very slight

It is no doubt due to the announcement made some time ago that the cosmic rays probably played a part in the existence and maintenance of life that such ideas as those exposed at the head of this article have arisen But all this is very vague and entirely speculative and the insistence at present, is upon the relation of the mysterious radiation to the birth in the universe of matter itself the rays are supposed to arise from the continual creation of new atoms, the process taking place out in interstellar space To quote Dr Millikan 'the cosmic rays are the signals sent out through the heavens of the creation of the common elements out of positive and negative electrons

The formation of atoms out of electrons liberates energy of a very high vibratory frequency, and this explains why the process of creation just described gives rise to the penetrating rays

As far as observation and resultan efforts to form guiding theories are concerned the existence of this radiant energy so far from implying any possible catastrophic change in the existing regime indicates, on the contrary, a regenerative process which might be interpreted as proof that the universe is eternal, though passing through cycles which involve the successive creation dissipation and recreation of individual parts

The newspaper at its best is not devoted to any special reform cause Too many organizations for professional reform have little effect beyond furnishing jobs for paid workers Too many organizations of reform misrepresent facts What the people need most is accurate information Once they are accurately informed and understand what things are all about they show capacity for making wise choices Most bad choices in elections and in life come not from malice but from misinformation What this country particularly needs in newspapers is more papers that will print both sides of a controversy

BUSINESS ISSUES RUSHED TO FRONT

National Prosperity, Tax Reduction and Tariff Stressed by G. O. P.

BY WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
Marion Star Staff Writer

Washington, Oct. 31—National prosperity, tax reduction, business stability and the protective tariff were rushed to the front line trenches today as the Republican party's major issues as the campaign to elect Herbert Hoover president entered its final stage.

While the Republican nominee began the work of closing up his capital headquarters, the leading spokesmen of the party hammered home business issues as a final reason for a Republican victory next Tuesday. Hoover will touch upon the same issues tonight in his St. Louis speech Friday night, which will be devoted chiefly to a further explanation of his farm relief program and his proposal for developing inland waterways.

The Republican strategists meanwhile swept prohibition aside in their battle for the "Atlantic seaboard" even though Democratic leaders have sought to make the wet and dry question a paramount question from Massachusetts to Maryland. In the south and west, however, the Republicans raised the issue, pointing to Hoover's defense of the Eighteenth amendment and his Democratic opponent's proposal for changing the dry amendment.

In the east, still looked upon by Hoover advisers as the great battleground, the tariff was given a greater play than at any previous time during the campaign. Both Charles Evans Hughes, speaking in Worcester, Mass., and Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, speaking from here over the radio, stressed the importance to the country of keeping the Republican party in power to control the tariff. Both credited American prosperity in large part to the action of the tariff in barring out cheap competitive foreign made goods.

LANSING RITES TO BE AT WATERTOWN

City Hall Bell Tolls in Mourning for Former Diplomat

Watertown, N. Y., Oct. 31—The body of Robert Lansing, secretary of state under President Wilson, is expected to arrive here today from Washington, where he died yesterday. Funeral services and burial will take place in this city, which was Mr. Lansing's birthplace. The bell at city hall was tolled for several minutes last night in mourning for the former diplomat.

CAPITAL MOURNS

Messages of Condolence Come From All Over World

Washington, Oct. 31—Washington today mourned the passing of Robert Lansing, secretary of state in the Wilson war cabinet.

But Washington was not alone, for messages of condolences from all over the world came to the Lansing home today from presidents, kings, princes, rulers, potentates, and personages with whom the secretary had been associated in his duties during one of the most trying periods in American history.

Death was due to a heart attack. Mr. Lansing, who was 64 years old, had been ill for several days. He lapsed into unconsciousness at noon yesterday and died at 1:26 o'clock.

Mrs Lansing and his two sisters, Miss Emma B. Lansing and Miss Katherine Ten Eyck Lansing, were at the bedside when the end came.

President Wilson appointed Mr. Lansing as secretary of state in June, 1915, to succeed William Jennings Bryan. He resigned from office on Feb 13, 1920, at the request of the president. Mr. Wilson, ill in the white house, was nettled because Lansing had called meetings of the cabinet during his illness. Wilson and Lansing also had differences over foreign policy.

Since his retirement from the cabinet, Lansing had engaged in law practice here with Lester H. Woodsey, as solicitor of the state department.

What Doctors Say
About the Laxative Habit

What do YOU do when the bowels need a little assistance? If you clear up the condition with some laxative made with CASCARA, there is nothing better for the system—for the blood.

But if you don't KNOW the laxative you have learned to depend on is of harmless cascara, here's some truly valuable advice:

The bark of a tree called cascara is the most marvelous conditioner mankind has yet found. It stimulates the bowel's muscular action, but does NOT weaken. A violent laxative forms the laxative HABIT. You always need more on the morrow. With cascara, you don't. Its gentle influence carries on sometimes for days. With less and less need of any aid, as time goes on.

So, the very next time you feel sluggish, take only a candy Cascaret. Delightful to the taste, sweet and acceptable to any stomach, and just as efficient as the powerful purges that fairly paralyze the peristaltic walls of one's intestines. The only habit you'll get from Cascarets is the one of going weeks and months without ANY help of the kind. And when you do invoke their aid again, the same small dose suffices. Any doctor can tell you about cascara, and any druggist has the candy Cascarets.—Adv.

An old Maine woods recipe gives the finest baked-bean flavor known

They have a unique way of baking beans in the logging camps of the Maine woods. They bake them in the ground!

The big round-bellied bean pot is filled with the flavor-rich ingredients—lots of brown sugar, molasses and prime sugar-cured pork. Then it is put to bake all night long in the "bean hole"—an oven in the ground.

This gives the finest baked-bean flavor known. A blend of forest fragrance, pungent wood smoke, fresh earthen oven.

And now this same wonderful woods flavor is reproduced for your own table. In Bean Hole Beans! You'll be delighted with this new achievement in flavor. It's so different! Enjoy it today. Ask your grocer to send you 2 or 3 cans. Two sizes—medium and large.

IT TAKES ALL-BRAN TO RELIEVE CONSTIPATION

More and more people are eating bran for "health's sake" these days. And it's a fine thing. But not everybody realizes what a difference there is in so-called "brans." Doctors say it takes 100% bran to supply enough roughage to relieve constipation. Part-bran products, at best, can only be partly effective.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is 100% bran. It furnishes roughage in effective quantities—and in the most effective form: cooked and krumbled. It does a work part-bran products cannot hope to equal. Two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal—are guaranteed to relieve constipation.

Serve ALL-BRAN often. With milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Be sure you get genuine Kellogg's though—in the red-and-green package. Use it in cooking. Sprinkle into soups. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Served everywhere. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Beauty and the Million

DRAMATIC STORY OF AMAZING ADVENTURE

BY WILLIAM ALMON WOLFF

CHAPTER FORTY FIVE

JIM looked at the reporter.

"I don't know that I'm surprised", he said. "The more I thought about it, after you went last night, the more certain it was that she must have taken it. And—well, it should end that, it wasn't likely, that she'd give it up."

"No. I suppose not," said Trowbridge. "I did all I could, Jim. I took a chance and went pretty high in my bid. She didn't want more. She didn't just say she didn't want it—she made me believe it."

He shook his head.

"That girl puzzles me," he said. "I've known her ever since she was but Broadway, the way I knew pretty nearly every well known girl of her sort. I supposed she was like the rest. She's not. You're quite right. I—well, I don't blame you for having fallen for her. I thought you were cuckoo, last night, when you got so mad. But—Lord, if I hadn't known what I did she'd have fooled me, today."

"I suppose there ought to be some satisfaction in that for me, Ed," said Jim. "But there isn't, somehow—not much. In some cases extenuating circumstances might do some good. This time they don't. I had too much at stake to take any chances at all."

"I don't get it yet," said Trowbridge. "There's something about that girl that baffles me, even now. She's going to give Blake that letter all right—she hasn't done it yet, by the way, and I did have some wild idea of trying to get it away from her but—"

Jim shook his head.

"I don't think so," he said. "In the first place, I don't think we could, and anyway—"

"Oh, I give it up myself," said Trowbridge. "It wouldn't do any good. She could tell him, even if we got the letter. The name's all Blake needs. No—I have a feeling—I don't know—I think there's something going on we don't know anything about. I can't put my finger on it."

"I guess it's all up," said Jim. He laughed. "And all day things have been coming fast—Ed, they've come better than I dreamed they could the wildest days I had!"

Trowbridge echoed his laugh.

"Isn't it always the way?" he said. "Don't there a chance that can swing Delmar into line, anyway?"

"After he knows the truth? Why should he stand for that? I wouldn't—would you?"

"Probably not. Oh, you're right—it doesn't look so good. I'm sorry, Jim. I've done everything I could think of."

"You certainly have. You've been a good pal, Ed. I only wish there was some possible way for me to show you how much I appreciate it."

"Forget that! I'm only sore because I seem to have shot my bolt. I'll tell you one thing though—Lamar's not awfully happy about the whole thing. I think she thinks a lot of you, Jim."

"She's picked a queer way to prove it!"

"I know. But you can't tell what she's up against, either. Men like the fellow Blake are queer with women—they seem to be able to get an awful strangle hold on them some times."

"I know. I don't think I'll be too hard on her, Ed. Not that she's likely to care. I won't be seeing her again, anyway. Or anyone else, after Blake pulls off his party."

"Will you go to Boston?" asked Trowbridge.

"Oh, I suppose so! I might as well go through the motions. It won't do any good but I'll keep on fighting till I'm definitely licked. I started this—I won't quit I may be licked, but I'll make Blake play the last card of the hand."

"I'll go along, I think" said Trowbridge.

"You will?" Jim was touched. "That's mighty white of you, but I don't see why you should—"

"Oh, I want to see it through. And—you can't tell—I might have some influence on this lawyer. He might possibly take my word for it that you're really on the way to bring off something big if you're left free to do it. And—if the worst comes to the worst—well, I can help with the papers. If it comes to a smash we want to keep it as quiet as possible."

"That's so, of course," said Jim. "For Delmar's sake I think Blake'll help there. He won't want it—Miss Delmar to be mixed up with me in the papers, of course."

"By George—that's so!" I hadn't thought of that!" said Trowbridge, brightening. "We might use that as a weapon—he's playing with fire, you see, in a way, if he really cares about her."

"I'd better go over tonight and see the old gentleman in the morning," said Jim. "I ought to get there before Blake does. As I say, I think it's just a waste of time, but I'll try it."

"Good luncn. I'll keep track of Blake and go over when he does—I'll keep you posted. Well—I've got to get to work. So long."

"So long," said Jim.

From his office Jim walked over, on the way home, to the Grand Central and made a reservation for the night train. This time he bought a lower berth without hesitation. His cash reserve was almost gone—but nothing like that mattered, any more. Probably, by this time tomorrow, the whole thing would be over; the few dollars he had would last him until then, when nothing would be of importance.

He went home, then, told Moto to pack his bag for a two-day absence and asked him to take it to the station later.

"Mister boss eat dinner here?" said Moto.

"No—no, thanks, Moto—I'm not hungry," said Jim.

"Lady telephone."

His heart leaped. Irene! No other woman ever called him up! Had she relented?

"Miss Delmar?"

Moto shook his head.

"Not that name. Other lady. Miss Le—Miss Margaret—"

"Oh—Miss Lamar!" said Jim, dully. "What did she want? Why had she called him up?"

"She say you call her—" said Moto, casually.

He went to the phone.

"Oh—you!" she said. "Jim Hexham—I just want to tell you I'm—I'm sorry—"

"That's nice of you," he said. "Of course, if you're really sorry, you can prove it quite easily."

"I know. You think so. Naturally, I can't—and I can't explain. But—I'm truly sorry. Good—good bye—"

"Good bye," he said.

Slowly he walked away from the house. A sudden impulse changed his course; he found himself nearing the house in which the Delmars lived. Irene, he knew, was in town. He went in; uncertain whether she would see him, had himself announced. Almost to his surprise she came to him. Her manner was cold; she looked at him, waiting for him to speak.

"Irene—" he said. "I—I couldn't let it go—I couldn't think that it was the end, this morning, on the telephone—"

"The end—of what?" she said. "Don't be melodramatic, Jim."

"You know what I mean," he said.

"I know that you're a very ridiculous person," she said. "First you come to me with an extraordinary and silly tale about the man you know I'm going to marry. Then I find that you're carrying on an affair with a notorious woman of Broadway—"

"That doesn't happen to be true," he said.

"No"? she said. "I'm afraid you'll find that most people think so. In my case—I am afraid you've drawn certain conclusions from my—my liking for you. I did like you, you see."

"You did!" he echoed, bitterly. "That means you don't any more!"

"I didn't say that," she said. "But—all things considered, I think it's wiser for an intimacy between us to cease. Ralph dislikes you—you do like him. Naturally, that makes it difficult for me to have you as a friend. If you didn't add to that difficulty, I might—oh, it's no use! I shall see you when it is necessary—but—"

"I understand," he said. "Then I'll say good bye, Irene. I—I'm sorry."

"Good bye," she said. "And—good luck."

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affection

BY ADELE GARRISON

Katie Continues to Talk

KATHERINE'S prediction of Katie's forgetting her grievance against me and resuming talkative status within a few days, did not materialize. She walked gloomily during the entire time of preparation for the Brinston visit, although, to do her justice, she did not let her gloom affect her work. She went through her tasks in whirlwind fashion and so thoroughly as to satisfy even Mother Graham. My mother-in-law, who, drawn by the lure of overseeing the house-cleaning—her favorite diversion—decided to forgive me magnificently for my stand against her upon the day of Katie's trip to Quogue, and came out of her self-imposed seclusion in her room in time to exercise a superb supervision over every detail.

I made but one cautious attempt to placate my little maid whose ego had been offended by my ignoring her attempts to tell me of her trip. After dinner following Mary's description of the freakishly dressed woman in mourning who had so amused Prince Georges, I went into the kitchen and after directions for breakfast, put a casual question.

"Did you get to the funeral in time, Katie?"

My little maid stiffened and looked at a point a foot or two above my head.

"Oh, yah, I get dere," she said sullenly.

"Was it a large funeral?" I persisted, trying to give the effect of being interested in anything which concerned her, "and were there many flowers?"

"Yah! It vere.' Katie answered broodingly, "and hear flowers. You say you want melon for breakfast?"

I took the hint, also my departure, after assuring her that melons were to be served for breakfast, but I stopped just inside the dining room door at the sound of a soliloquy which I guessed she intended me to hear, but whose sentiment she did not dare to voice directly.

"Some folks so dam smart," my little maid muttered vindictively, "they no listen ven I vant talk, dey sheent kin vit can good long vile. Vill I get ready to tell something!"

I took the report of my futile mission back to Katherine and Lillian, but neither then nor during the next day which preceded Lillian's departure, could we hit upon any plan for ejecting Katie's effigurate tips. We all felt that my sullen little maid perhaps held the key to the mysterious Janet Rawdon to whom Mary was checking out the sinister part of her allowance each week.

I worried over the thing inordinately during Lillian's absence, and when she returned with Marion from their mountain trip, browned, rosy and with an air of tranquility which spoke of soothed nerves, her first question when we were alone told me that she, too, had been concerned over Katie's obstinate silence.

"Has Katie spilled anything yet?" she asked.

"Not a word," I told her.

"If her grouch lessening, do you think? It isn't like Katie to hold a grudge so long."

"She isn't quite as sullen as she was," I said. "But it's her seldom portance that is wounded, and—"

"That's the most deadly injury to the world, you know. However, I'll bet I know a remedy. Samuel Brinton, among his other faults, is the most reckless tipper in the world. But it will stand us in good stead. When he leaves Katie will be in such high good humor that holding a grouch will be impossible to her. Let's see, when's he coming, day after tomorrow, isn't it?"

"That's the date he named," I said. "And leaves the next day, praise be," she went on, "if prophesy Katie will come down from her high horse shortly afterward, so let's forget all about it until the Brinton's have come and gone. By the way, what did your father say? Will he give $6m if the men and twice for me?"

WESTERN GIRL STRENGTHENED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Manchester, So. Dakota.—"I was in a terribly weak and run down condition when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it and after a short time I felt better. We are a family of five and live on a 360 acre farm, so I have quite a good deal to do both indoors and out. At first I was unable to do anything and had to have a girl, but after taking the Vegetable Compound I finally gained my strength back and also gained considerable in weight."—Mrs. Otto J. Gerken, R. What one taste showed Mrs. Cadle about

Pie Crust

A SWEET delicate shortening can make the crust of a pie as delectable as the filling! To make sure that your shortening is sweet and delicate, test it the same way you test your milk and butter—taste it!

Mrs. Katherine M. Cadle did just that; then wrote us:

"The taste of Crisco is sweet, agreeable—without the slightest trace of any 'strong flavor' which one occasionally finds even in the best of other shortenings.

"For pies, Crisco has proven excellent; it makes a flaky crust that browns beautifully and has a fine flavor."

Standard Pie Crust

Amount for one-crust pie (Or baked shell)	For medium size two-crust pie
1¼ cups pastry flour	2 cups pastry flour
⅓ cup Crisco	⅔ cup Crisco
¾ teaspoon salt	¾ teaspoon salt
4 to 6 tablespoons cold water	6 to 8 tablespoons cold water

Sift pastry flour and salt together. Cut shortening in with two knives until the consistency of small peas. Add only enough ice water to hold. Roll. For baked shell, cover bottom of pie plate. Leave enough edge to fold back to make it firm. Prick well with a fork to prevent bubbles. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) for 15 minutes.

Sour Cream Pie

Filling

1 cup sour cream, ¾ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon Crisco, ¼ teaspoon salt, 3 eggs separated, 1 tablespoon flour, ¾ teaspoon each clover, cinnamon, allspice, nutmeg, ¾ cup raisins

Mix flour and sugar. Add cream and Crisco. Bring to a boil. Add beaten egg yolks, spices, salt and raisins. Boil five minutes, stirring constantly. Cool, pour in baked shell. Cover with meringue. Beat egg whites stiff, add 3 tablespoons sugar and pinch of baking powder. Cover pie. Brown in moderate oven (350° F.).

Chess Pie

Filling

½ cup Crisco, 1 cup sugar, 2 egg yolks beaten, 1 egg white, Juice and grated rind of small lemon, ⅔ cup chopped raisins, ⅔ cup chopped walnuts, ½ teaspoon salt

Cream Crisco, sugar and egg yolks. Add raisins and nuts. Fold in the white of one egg beaten until stiff. Line patty pans with crust, put in the filling and bake in hot oven (450° F.) 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 325° F. and bake until filling is set about 30 minutes. When done, top with meringue made of two egg whites beaten stiff and four tablespoons of powdered sugar. Return to oven to brown.

(All measurements level)

You taste your milk—
You test your eggs—
NOW . . .
taste your shortening

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

Crisco was used by Mrs. Edna Riggs Crabtree in The Star Cooking School Recently

Crisco is the registered trade mark of a shortening manufactured by The Procter & Gamble Company.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

I AM kinda sorry the haunted house is built over into a filling station and the road is being paved that goes past it, like I told Jubilee when we had woke up this morning and I had got the lamp lit, because the days are now so short that I have to get up in the night to milk the cows, and Jubilee acted kinda and like he understood. But a fella has got so many things to feel sorry about, like feeling sorry because the apples and peaches and cherries are all off the trees and because he hasn't got a mustash and a tail like a monkey that he can hang from a limb by and wing. If I had a tail I could hang from a limb and hold Annabelle Lee in my arms and swing with her. But that wouldn't be so good because she would have a tail to and she would probly have it around my neck or in my eyes, or letting it hang where a dog could get hold it, a girl don't very brite.

I let Jubilee down just as it was getting light, and then I combed to my face and got the pail and went out to the barn, and none of the bunch had come, and it seemed kind of lonesome all by myself. I had my head against the side of the old cow going ak fast as I could and making the milk go "squirtly squirt" against the side of the pail when something big and raft and dumpish landed right square on the back of my neck, and I stopped milking but didn't move for a long time. I thought it might be a spider and sock me if I moved, but after I hadn't moved for a long time and so hadn't it I straightened up and put my hand back and got and looked at it and smelt of it, and it was a half of a rotten banana.

I thought of the Lost Bag of Tripe, so I got up with my milk pail and the rotten banana and went over to the door and slammed it like I and went out, and waited, and then there was a noise upstairs and someone started coming down the ladder, and it was Red. I was surprized. So was he. His back had to be toward me when he was coming down, and he got both feet on the floor, and turned around, and he was grinning. And then he got it. I didn't throw it at him, I plastered it on his face with my hand, and then I rubbed it in, and he would have fit, only his eyes were full. He said he was surprized that I would treat him that way, and I said I was surprized he would think he could plaster me in the neck and get away with it. Then he said he got there early and was laying up on the hay eating a banana and threw the hull part away and didn't know it hit me. I think he is a liar.

We had a good time in school today. The teacher set on a folding chair and it folded.

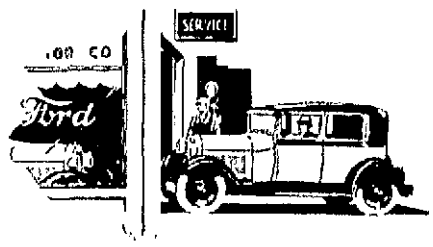
Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles



THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in. Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A periodic checking-up, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

Mystery Around Horrible Burning of Girl Solved in Story of "Psychic" Love

Hurls Self into Furnace at Police Station When Spiritual Lover Fails To Keep Appointment, Man Denies Any Affair with Woman

Lake Forest Ill, Oct 31—Mystery surrounding the horrible burning of pretty Hredeh Knaul former Lindsley of Chicago and Sunday school teacher was cleared today with the girls own story told from a bed of pain in Lake Forest hospital

Miss Knaul said she hurled herself in the burning mouth of the furnace in the basement of the Lake Forest police station to 'purify' herself and show her faith when her psychic spirit lover failed to keep an appointment with her

Her head arms and feet were horribly burned Even if she recovers physicians say both arms and probably the right leg will have to be amputated

The eerie love rite unparalleled in the lore of psychic phenomena occurred Monday midnight in the police station where the man she claims as her spiritual lover Charles W Hitchcock—was employed as night marshal

Father of Four

Hitchcock is 35 years old and the father of four children By day he is a teacher of salesmanship public speaking and expression Miss Knaul learned it is known that for the past week Hitchcock has been laid up at his home with a broken leg

The young woman's story of how she clubbed to the mouth of the furnace and held herself there until she apparently dropped unconscious to the floor, fulfilled with facts in the possession of investigators Her nude body was found near the furnace early yesterday She was rushed to the Lake Forest hospital

At the first sign of consciousness State s Attorney A V Smith of Lake county hurried forward and asked

Who did this?'

I did it myself—for faith for purity' she whispered

By degrees this story was drawn from her

Studied Under 'Lover'

I have known Mr Hitchcock for four years I studied from him while I was teaching school in Waukegan A few months ago I got to know him spiritually

Understand this was no material love affair Advanced psychology made me understand him For several weeks I have been hearing a voice say 'Have faith—have faith' That was his voice

Thus we communed, though many and distance might place us far apart

I had an appointment with him last night He did not keep it I had given him all all my love When he did not appear I communed with him in the spirit world before the fire Again I heard the voice—have faith

To prove my faith, I thought of the fire I removed my clothing which I burned Then—I burned myself

Marshal Hitchcock located at his home in bed denied that he had ever had any sort of love affair with the girl

I gave her lessons in sales psychology for two years,' he admitted She then withdrew to take a position with a Chicago publishing company Since then she has visited us for advice When she encountered difficult problems I helped her how I handle them That was the extent of our relations'

TARIFF COMMISSION URGED BY RASKOB

Democratic Chairman Declares for Drastic Revision of Rate-Making

New York Oct 31—Drastic revision of the existing method of tariff making in Congress was urged today by Chairman John J Raskob of the Democratic national committee

His plan calls for a constitutional amendment taking the power from the lists of representatives and vesting it in a new tariff commission

Launching a final drive for the support of business Raskob pledged his influence in the event of Governor Smith's election to bring about creation of the new tariff commission to regulate all changes from the existing tariff schedules

His plan contemplates a commission, the standing of which will be comparable to that of the United States supreme court he declared Should unanimity in outlining his views by a group of New York business men at Democratic national headquarters here Raskob declared himself still a believer in organized trust and market production, declines after election in favor of which party triumphs As chairman of the finance committee of General Motors prior to his acceptance of the Democratic chairmanship Raskob's market views were eagerly sought by Wall Street

PRINCETON IS TEAM OF DESTINY

TIGERS MUST BEAT OHIO STATE ELEVEN TO RULE BIG TEN

Loot for East To Grab Off National Championship

BY DAVIS J WALSH

PRINCETON, N J, Oct 31—1928 football at Princeton universi[ty] is about to spawn another team of [fi]ne, one of those fances of [fo]otball without which Hollywood would be just another bartender's apron? [Th]at approximately was the local idea [of] as a group of young men [fa]mously known as the student [bo]dy began to see stars in the light of a variety for the first time while they thumbed back six years through the scores of their football diary to prove that Princeton will and must [be] Ohio State at Columbus on Saturday

Six years ago, Princeton had a football team that apparently couldn't go wrong if it would The fact of the matter was that it wouldn't They say here that the 1928 outfit is much the same, only more so, and after it [ha]s Ohio State—their story, not [ou]rs—it will have placed eastern football in the position it long has deserved—still their story—and long has escaped in a highly sensational manner, the afterthought being mine The east has become a bit overstuffed on the patronizing air with which it is viewed by the rest of the country

Seeks State Victory

This year, it has a great chance to produce an unchallenged champion of the nation and Princeton agrees it can do its part by beating the team that possibly is headed toward the Big Ten title If that is achieved the Army, having beaten Southern Methodist from the southwest and Yale and Harvard, winners over two southern conference teams then can draw a line through Yale and Princeton to lay authority on the Big Ten

All it would need after that is victories over Nebraska probable Big Six champion, and Stanford, impending winner on the coast to take title to the national championship And all John Lanahan needs toward his first million is $999 999 99 I know this because I personally saw him spend the other cent this morning

Anyhow, it is a pretty picture and basically much wrong with it except that the best of the south, Georgia Tech Vanderbilt, Tennessee Florida etc, don't figure in the analogy while one of its worst, Virginia, got a scoreless tie with Princeton

It is this incident around which resident optimists are weaving their notion of destiny Princeton might have been scored upon in this game It wasn't It should have lost to Cornell on Saturday It didn't. That they say was the team of destiny all over again, a team that apparently didn't have anything yet always had enough It was the team that went west to Chicago to do the best it could Its best with Chicago leading by 10 to 7, was just too good The middle west hasn't seen Princeton since and somehow has contrived to hear up very barely without it

BELGIANS LAP FIELD TO TAKE LEAD IN BIKE RACE

Chicago Oct 31—The Belgian team of Cesaar de Bacles and Maurits Declerck today was riding in the lead of the six day bike race at Broadway armory

The race was 60 hours old last night when the Belgians climaxed a terrific sprinting and jamming session by lapping the field to take the lead from Van Kempen and Rooks, now in second place

Walthour and Fean are riding in third place

HAWKEYES PREPARE FOR FRAY WITH OHIO NOV. 10

Iowa City, Ia, Oct 31—Apparently discounting the South Dakota game here Saturday, the Hawkeyes are pointing for the conference clash with Ohio State Nov 10 concentrating on a defense against the Buckeye backs touted forward pass attack

PILOTS THE FIGHTING HAWKEYES

This determined looking young man is Arndt known as the 'Day report Flash' who has been shifted from the position of fullback to quarter since Mayes McNair's frequent exhibition of hefty line battering Coach Ingwerson has a lot of faith in Arndt's generalship and sent him into the game Saturday with the hope that he could outsmart Minnesota's Thundering Herd which the 7 6 victory would indicate, he did

"FOLLOW the ball! Follow the ball Princeton!"

There he goes now with 'follow the ball follows—stay with the ball' This is Hillebrand one of the two best tackles Princeton ever had—Princeton, the home of top top tackles Wondering what he meant by so much exhortation on one slogan spectators strolled him in the end to get the answer Usually they had little wait before discovering

Let's follow Hillebrand with our eyes, while he is following the ball and trying to get others to do like wise in this game they are playing against friendly enemy Yale tied in 1898

Princeton is on the defense Yale tries a plunge through tackle, while Hillebrand is on the other side of the line but he is no idle spectator just because the play doesn't come within easy reach If the ball will not come to him he will go to the ball—and he goes with everything he has and that's plenty He fights to the core of the play—to where the ball is They go around the other end Still he runs and follows after for he has learned that lots of things happen to a runner to slow the ball up and if he will but keep going hard and fast he's liable to be in at the death' after all

* * *

PRINCETON gets the ball Same thing over again no matter what kind of play the Tigers try Hillebrand sticks right with that ball—there is action always If he can get ahead of his runner and interfere for him so much the better, if the runner gets ahead of him still he trails the play like a bloodhound Sometimes his runner sticks up to dodge and Art ratches up with him grabs him in the old 'pull and pull' of those days and does what he can to his runner smartly tackled Then 'Art reaches hand to protect him from Temptation on Is the runner weary 'Art pulls him to his feet and conserves his teammate's strength

And now there goes Kelly across for a touchdown—Hillebrand right with him of course Wonder How He's dropped the ball' Just like that—a bit of carelessness What across chain and then the ball slipped out of Art' grasp apparently without reason Yale got it, of course' Well, she had every right to get it—but there's a tall chap name of Hillebrand, right beside Kelly —went across the line with him in fact, who is diving for that loose ball before it even hits the ground and he has it safe for a Princeton touchdown after all Do you understand now what he means by follow that ball

* * *

IT was not only in this game Hillebrand followed the ball but in all of them That was one trait that was fairly ground into him at Andover and it used to be done better then—and later—than it is today Princeton man means games during the four years that Hillebrand was a mainstay at Lawrenceville and many touchdowns came about by reason of his getting the other Tigers to stay with the ball even as he did

But don't think Hillebrand made so many A A squads merely by following his nose Hillebrand was a fighting demon one of your in deadly earnest chaps, a veritable dreadnaught—skeered of nothin'"—and a perfect team player—helping his guard take his man Look when the play was coming through guard and just as helpful to his 'underdog' flayer, end, when they had to two-time an opponent As for defense—why man, he was the First Verdun, the one in advance every second He also ran with the ball from position most successfully and was a storm on breaking through and tearing runs

The kind of game Hillebrand put up at tackle as well indicated by the quality of the worth put upon him by that great Yale tackle, Jim Reed Even when four years were up some one asked him what he thought of Hillebrand as a player His reply was

Hillebrand is the best man I ever met

That's all I'll say right enough for anybody

Maroon Football Fans Hope for Dope Upset When Penn Team Plays In Chi

CHICAGO Oct 31—It has been over and over again in the annals of sport that there is nothing quite so uncertain as an apparent certainty While in a few words it is one of the reasons why Chicago and Penn fans are hopeful for the best when the battered Maroon meet the powerful Penn outfit on Stagg Field Saturday afternoon

If there ever were two teams who appeared unevenly matched claims from past performances it is this pair who meet in the second first intersectional match of the season Pennsylvania is a title threat this year Navy the other day was the first time that any team had passed over the Quakers goal line Ohio State for years has accumulated 100 points in its scoring column

Now, on the face of these statistics one might be inclined to think that Saturday is going to be a walk away for the boys from the east That is if one weren't acquainted with the vagaries of big time football and the things can happen

Take Maroon with five varsity centers on their squad, have managed to amass a total of [illegible] In the opinion of games they've played [illegible] of them against Wyoming which trounced the only triumph and [illegible] seven against Minnesota Penn on the other hand has played four games against [illegible] and has won all of them a total of [illegible] points Navy the other day was the first time that any team had passed over the Quakers goal line Ohio State for years has accumulated 100 points in its scoring column

Now, on the face of these statistics one might be inclined to think that Saturday is going to be a walk away for the boys from the east That is if one weren't acquainted with the vagaries of big time football and the things can happen

OXFORD—Final preparations are being made for putting the Miami football team in shape for its third Buckeye game which will be played here Saturday with Ohio The true strength of the big Red is not known as many of the regulars have been out of games this season due to injuries but the showing made against Ohio Wesleyan marks them as a strong eleven Benefitted by a week's rest and the return of Paul Glick regular quarterback, a rejuvenated team will be sent against the Bobcats from Athens

* * *

CINCINNATI—Ways and means of checking the scoring avalanche of Kenneth Wesleyan is the chief job on the hands of Coach Jon Meyer and his St Xavier Musketeers this week The Cardinals have a formidable team being in a triple tie for the Buckeye conference championship Their goal line was increased to eight games last year, and they are out to make another undefeated showing for 1928, expecting St Xavier to stand in the way

FOOTBALL PROGRAM HAS INTERSECTIONAL FLAVOR SATURDAY

Five Eastern Teams Tackle Opponents from Mid-western Sector

NEW YORK, Oct 31—With five eastern teams to play opponents from midwestern sector, Saturday's football card presents a decidedly intersectional flavor Princeton meets Ohio State on the latters field Penn clashes with Chicago in the Windy City Penn State moves over to Philadelphia for the Notre Dame game, Army entertains DePauw at West Point and Colgate plays Wabash at Hamilton, N Y

Princeton and Ohio State are unbeaten although the record of the Tigers is marred by a scoreless tie with Virginia The Chicago encounter appears to be a likely spot for Penn to stage a comeback such as they made last year after suffering several unexpected setbacks Penn State should provide a first rate test of the supremacy of Notre Dame's reformation

The Army DePauw game figures to be just a breeze for the Cadets Blue Colgate will perform against Wabash in a mystery Parlier in the season Colgate agreed to be one of the strongest teams in the east, but was crushed by New York university Jan Saturday, 47 to 0

The New York University Georgetown contest in New York will be the only game in which two undefeated and until teams clash The N Y U warriors are second only to Georgetown in the list of the east's high scoring teams

Yale and Dartmouth both beaten for the first time last Saturday and both seeking to take it out on somebody will mingle at New Haven, Conn Other unbeat eleats will put Notre Dame's tackles Pittsburgh, Columbia meets Cornell and Lafayette battles Washington and Jefferson

Harvard will have an easy opponent in Lehigh Other eastern games include Brown vs Holy Cross and Navy vs West Virginia Wesleyan

Audience Hears Thorough Discussion of City School Issue at Public Meeting

$750,000 in Bonds Needed To Solve Problem Here Would Still Leave Local School Debt Below State Average, Civic Gathering Is Informed

All of the various phases of Marion's school problem and the solution proposed in the $750,000 bond issue to be voted upon Nov. 6 were thoroughly explained to an audience which assembled in the auditorium at Central Junior High building, last night, in response to an invitation from the Marion Civic association.

The discussion, illustrated with charts and pictures clearly showing how Marion is facing a critical situation and that there is probability of the annual expenditure falling considerably below that figure. This would result in a proportionate reduction in the amount of bonds issued. Under provisions of the state law, the amount of bonds can not be definitely fixed until contracts are let.

As evidence that schools here have been operated on an economical basis, Supt. Mason presented figures showing comparative increases in tax revenue for county, city and schools during the period from 1921 to 1926, inclusive. In that time, the county's receipts from taxes increased 25 per cent, the city's 56 per cent and the schools' 22 per cent. In the same period there has been an increase of approximately 750 in school enrollment.

Of each dollar paid in taxes here, only 37 cents goes for school purposes. Official reports show that in a group of 20 Ohio cities of Marion's class, only two receive less than Marion for school purposes.

All of the proposed bond issue is to be used to pay for supplying Marion's immediate school needs with exception of $50,000 for purchase of a senior high school site, the superintendent explained. This site is a 17½ acre tract located in the southeast section of the city, south of the King residence, known as Elcomb. Purchase at this time is conceded to be a wise business move in view of the certainty of future increase in land values.

The remainder of the money will be required to provide building expansion to eliminate present congestion in the present buildings.

The proposed high school site has been designated by educational experts from the outside as the best available location, Supt. Mason stated. According to the present trend of the city's growth, investigation has shown, it will be practically at the center of the high school population before many years have elapsed.

Although the bond issue proposed at this time is intended almost entirely for solution of the present problem, the board of education has outlined a program for school development extending as far as 1950, Supt. Mason explained. Working out of the plan for the future, however, will not call for additional expenditures or new indebtedness for a long period of years. Before that point is reached, the present debt, including the $750,000 bond issue, will have been almost entirely paid off.

Debt Greatly Reduced

Five years ago, Marion's school debt was approximately $1,050,000, since that time no school bonds have been issued and a steady reduction each year has brought the debt down to an unusually low figure.

Supt. Mason explained that the $750,000 is based upon maximum estimates of the cost of buildings and

SHERFEY ASSISTS IN PORTO RICO SURVEY

Former Marion Officer Directs Census in Guayama District

Government and army officials are now engaged in making a complete and systematic survey in Porto Rico in connection with plans for rehabilitating the area devastated by the hurricane of Sept. 13, according to a letter received yesterday by Dr. J. W. McMurray from Lieut. Walter Lee Sherfey, former commanding officer of the Harding scout honor guard here. Sherfey is now stationed at San Juan in command of Company B, 65th infantry.

At this time the former Marion officer is assisting in making a census survey of the storm ravaged territory, which will include a house-to-house canvass for the purpose of getting an accurate account of the storm damage.

Sherfey has charge of the work in a large district with Guayama as the central point. His task includes having approximately 20,000 printed forms filled out for residents of the district, showing the extent of loss in each case. He is to be assisted by a corps of 178 native school teachers.

Sherfey and his wife arrived in Porto Rico immediately after the great storm and he reports that he has been kept busy night and day since then assisting in relief and rehabilitation work. Recently he has had charge of a Red Cross truck train distributing blankets, tents, cots and other supplies to the natives. On that tour he was accompanied by a guard of 182 men.

Food prices are soaring in Porto Rico, Sherfey reports. Bananas are selling at six cents each and eggs at 81 a dozen. The lieutenant states that food for himself and wife averages $150 a month.

Dr. McMurray also received a letter yesterday from Mrs. Angelita Perez Lamboglia, of Guayama, thanking him for a supply of food which he sent to her and her family shortly after the hurricane left the Lamboglia family practically destitute. Dr. McMurray's acquaintanceship with the Lamboglia family dates back to 1898, when he served with Ohio troops in Porto Rico during the Spanish-American war.

NO CONTAGION

County Free of Communicable Diseases October Report Shows

October is apparently Marion county's most healthful month.

Reports in the office of Dr N. Sifrit, county health commissioner, show that there are no cases of contagious disease in the county at present. None has been reported during the month.

A check of contagious disease reports for last year show that October of 1927 was also without a communicable disease.

Men and women on every street---in every city and town--are pronouncing the new BUICK, with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day- - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - - -

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick.

Sweeping into the market when motor car lines were practically standardized—when imitation was destroying individuality—these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode—

A mode of body-symmetry—of size and magnificence—of soft contours instead of straight lines—of body-panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car.

And as the weeks have passed—and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent—public enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grown to unprecedented proportions!

Buick sales records have been broken! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.

The new Buick has become the ruling vogue! Men and women on every street . . . in every city and town . . . are pronouncing it the most beautiful automobile of the day!

THE hunger for love that lives in the heart of every young girl is thrillingly related in this gripping story of

DAPHNE

By Hazel Livingston

Author of "The Secret Studio"

LOVELINESS and heartaches, sacrifice and sinister scheming, hatred and joy—the full gamut of emotions is run in this intensely interesting drama describing the love of two girls, step-sisters, for the same man and the utterly different ways by which they tried to win him, leading to an ending so dramatic and unexpected that it will astonish you.

CHAPTER 1

DAPHNE lay flat on her back in the grass, squinting up at a turquoise sky through the lacy green of the leaves, the waxy white of the prune blossoms. Thinking. Thinking about lots of things.

About the freckles the sun would make on her nose. About the pink dress she wished she had. About the dinner dishes stacked in tottering, greasy piles on the kitchen table waiting to be washed.

It was Sunday, which meant there were more dishes than usual. Father always wanted chicken and dumplings on Sunday, even on the hottest days. Chicken and dumplings, and lemon cream pie. That was one thing her stepmother hadn't been able to change.

Daphne was 17, a very young and appealing 17. Gray eyes as big as saucers, black fringed and decked with amber. Hair as dense and dark as night. A sensitive red mouth. A faint line of freckles over a slightly tiptilted nose. A smooth white throat. Not at all the sort of 17 you would expect to find all alone in a prune orchard on a glorious April day. Certainly not the capable young woman who has just cooked a large dinner and is about to return to the kitchen and attack the dishes.

There was about her an utterly deceptive air of frailty. A look of wistful helplessness which made kind old ladies shake their heads and recommend cod liver oil, and which later—much later—was to make tired business men yearn to buy her beefsteaks, lobster, violets and fur coats, according to pocketbook and degree of respectability.

But Daphne didn't know that. Neither did she know that she had beauty. She had been a particularly plain, awkward child and had no idea she had outgrown it. For a perfectly normal 17-year-old, growing up in the jazz age, the things Daphne didn't know were amazing.

It was partly because the Haines ranch was so far from town, and partly because Father was so . . . different from other people. While Mother lived he was a Sultan in mail order clothes, forbidding his women to go abroad.

An angry god with drooping gray mustaches that wagged when he talked, and a heavy gold watch charm that rose and fell, rose and fell, over an unbuttoned vest. He talked principally of expense. But now that he was married to Mrs. Garroty—Daphne always thought of the new Mrs. Haines as Mrs. Garroty, though she dutifully called her Mama—now that he was married again he didn't care where anyone went or how much she spent if she'd just coax for it.

Mama and her daughter Crystal had all kinds of lovely things because they didn't mind coaxing, but Daphne couldn't coax. It made her red and uncomfortable, just thinking about it.

Mama had even coaxed for "a woman" to do the work—think of that! But though three came, none stayed longer than a week.

"You can't keep help in this God-forsaken place!" Mama stormed.

"You couldn't keep help in heaven," Crystal stormed right back at her. "No wonder they quit. Nag, nag, nag—I'm so sick of hearing you I'm nearly crazy myself—"

No matter what you secretly thought of Mama, sooner or later her daughter would say it for you—10 times worse. They were always yelling at each other.

"But I can't hear 'em out here," Daphne thought with satisfaction. "And they don't know where I am, I can stay out till Ralph McKevitt comes if I want to."

Ralph McKevitt . . . coming to see Crystal. Some people have all the luck. Here she'd been saving pictures and newspaper clippings of him for more than two years, ever since her first big game when she saw him swoop down the field, a blonde giant in a torn sweater, Stanford's hero . . . too heroic . . . too wonderful ever to hope to really know . . . and now Crystal had him for a boy friend.

Oh well, she'd get a good look at him as he came up the orchard road anyway. . . . What a heavenly day . . . you ought to be happy just to be alive. Like the sparrow hopping over there on the road with his wings and his tail all spread out, chirping . . . chirping to his love. . . .

A little wind stirred the leaves, a single white petal fluttered down. Then another. And another. One brushed her lips, gently, sweetly, like a kiss.

Her throat tightened. "You can't have everything!" she whispered to herself huskily . . "But what have I got? Nothing . . . not a thing . . . I'm going on 18 and nobody's ever loved me . . . maybe nobody ever will, and I'll just go on getting older and older and ugler and uglier . . ."

"Daphne! Daph-nee!" Someone was calling from the house, but Daphne didn't hear.

She lay wide-eyed, staring up at the sky, clutching the falling petals in her small hot hands. All over the orchard they were beginning to fall, all over the Santa Clara valley. Soon the ground would be white with petals, blossom time would be over . . . All this white scented beauty gone . . . turned into Prunes! . . . Dried Prunes . . . Stewed Prunes!

"And that's what I am!" she cried furiously, and sprang to her feet, "A prune!"

She turned, with swimming eyes to grope her way to the kitchen and the dishpan . . . . About all she was good for, to wash dishes . . .

Something bulked ahead of her . . . a man . . . a big man in a gray suit. His hands were on her shoulders, he was tilting back her face.

Ralph McKevitt. She knew it with her eyes shut . . . Ralph McKevitt! Her heart was bursting, bursting with love and tears. To think of him stopping in the orchard, getting out of his car as if he had come to see her instead of Crystal . . . Crystal . . .

"Let me go!" she whispered, conscience stricken. All the ecstacy of that one little moment faded, leaving only the ache.

But he didn't let her go. He pulled her closer, laughing. "Did I hear you refer to yourself as a prune? Did I?"

"No, I didn't say anything—I—"

"Now, now—I'm perfectly and completely, sober, Miss—Miss—what did you say the name was? McKevitt is my name. What did you say yours—"

"Oh please let me go, please."

"But you haven't explained about the prune. Now to my mind a prune, that is, a female prune, is—" She knew he was laughing, knew she ought to laugh too, but she couldn't. She wanted to look up at him, wanted terribly to see him just once . . . to see if his eyes were blue or brown, and she couldn't do that either . . . "Please—please let me go—"

She sobbed, and jilted her great, dark eyes to his. Saw her hero, her secret, sacred hero for the first time, blurred and shadowy, drowned in her own tears. But he saw her clearly enough. Saw the white loveliness of her small upturned face, the sweet dark sheen of her hair, the round slenderness of her throat.

"Why—you're—you're beautiful!" he said, with a queer catch in his voice. His hands dropped to his sides.

She heard him say it, as she broke away and ran.

* * *

Daphne crept up the back steps. Her cheeks were flaming. The screen door clicked behind her with its accustomed, familiar click. Toots, the yellow cat, came out from under the stove and rubbed against her, purring. The greasy dinner dishes were sprawled over the table just as she had left them. Everything was just the same. But she was different. Someone had said she was beautiful. Ralph. Ralph McKevitt.

While the dishwater was heating she tiptoed up the stairs to her room. She wanted to look at herself in the mirror.

The old boards in the hall squeaked. "Is that you, Daphne?" Crystal called from her open door. "I've been yelling for you for half an hour."

Daphne reluctantly turned away from the looking glass. There had been no miracle. She was as pale and thin as ever, all eyes and not a bit of curl to her hair . . . no miracle . . . except Ralph . . .

"Daphne!"

"What did you say, Crystal?"

"For Pete's sake! Are you deaf?" Crystal exploded, and Daphne hastily crossed the hall and came into the older girl's room, an apple green bower foaming with gold lace, boudoir pillow and taffeta ruffles.

Crystal sat at the dresser, nervously powdering her white neck. "Here, you do the back—and the back of my hair, will you? Little curls—around your finger—not too stiff! I've got the front all done!" She raised the large silver hand glass, and studied her profile complacently. "Not so worse!"

Daphne's fingers trembled a little as she brushed the curls, the crinkly golden curls—for Ralph.

"Hurry!" Crystal begged. "McKevitt's downstairs and I don't want to leave him alone with Mama. She's liable to tell him anything. What the chandeliers cost, or a shady story . . . she'll never learn. . . . Listen, hon, get me my blue hat and see if you can find my silver compact—no, not the enamel one, the silver one—"

She stopped suddenly with the perfume stopper—Quelque Fleurs—in her hand. "Do you know, Daphne, if you ever fill out you'll be a right pretty little thing. It just struck me. Now if you just had a little sex appeal, you poor Orphan Annie child—I'll have to take you in hand some time . . . when I'm not so busy!" She laughed, and sprinkled a few drops of perfume on the younger girl. "There—run along—no, wait—what did I do with my lipstick? Oh my God, I'm late, and here comes Mama. . . . Now, Mama, what do you want? Can't you see I'm hurrying?"

Mrs. Haines, a living prophecy of what Crystal would be at 45, limped into the room and sank with a groan onto the green taffeta bed. "Golly, my feet hurt. That corn on my little toe—just like a boil—throb, throb, throb—"

"Oh, Mama—dry up—and don't say golly—it sounds so common—"

"It does, does it? Ashamed of your mother? Afraid I'm not swell enough for the McKevitts. Well, let me tell you—"

"Mama! I'm so nervous now. If you begin that I won't go!" She threw her hat on the bed. "No matter what I try to do, you take all the joy out of it. Nag, nag, nag—oh, I'm sick of it—"

They glared at each other for an instant, these two so different and so alike. The mother, fat, red faced, brassy haired. The daughter exquisitely plump, pink and golden.

Mrs. Haines gave in first. "You look lovely, pet," she said warmly, and reached over to straighten Crystal's baby-blue sweater. "Hold still, it seems to draw a little, under the arm."

"Oh, let it draw!" Crystal jerked away angrily. "Poking! Always poking at me! Mama, you're right in my way! Daphne, for goodness sake, you get out anyhow, Mama won't—"

As the door closed behind Daphne the sound of voices, men's voices, came up to the two in the green room.

"Listen!" Crystal whispered, straining her ears.

"Yes, my father was in the wholesale butcher business," Old Man Haines was saying, entertaining the young man from the city, "and when he passed away my mother kept the business going just the same. A fine woman, Mr. McKevitt. Done all her own work with $50,000 cold cash in the bank, and not too proud to cook for the hired men—"

Bang! Crystal slammed the door shut and leaned against it, her face working. "Did you hear that?" she hissed through clenched teeth. "Did you hear that husband of yours bragging he kept a butcher shop?"

"Well, he don't now," Mrs. Haines returned reasonably. "He's practically retired, he don't have to work. And if you ask me, prune orchards are ruined enough for anybody—"

"Ruined?" Crystal whispered hysterically. "That old fool? I'm sick of him, I tell you—I'm sick of having to kiss his ugly old bald head and lick his boots for every little thing I want—"

"Well, you get everything you want, don't you? He hasn't refused you anything yet, has he? God knows you wouldn't be sitting in the lap of luxury now if I hadn't taken him. And I did it for you. Do you think I went after him for myself—do you think I'd have sacrificed myself—"

And Mrs. Haines, she who had been Adeline Garroty, "the stylish dressmaker from San Jose," shed an angry tear or two. "Why, the first time I ever set foot in the place, when I came out to make the grammar school graduating dress for Daphne, when his first wife was still alive, I thought to myself, 'What a gold mine for some woman!'—Did I marry him for myself? No—for you—and what thanks—"

"Oh stop—stop rubbing it in!" Crystal sobbed, and ran out, banging the door behind her. Her mother saw her driving away with McKevitt a few minutes later, laughing happily in the long, sand-colored car.

"High strung," she murmured, dabbing at her reddened nose with Crystal's powder puff, "Just like me, when I was a girl—"

Downstairs Daphne rattled the dishes. Presently she sang, keeping time softly with her feet. Old Man Haines snored in the sun room. It was peaceful in the house again. Crystal had gone out.

Mrs. Haines hadn't intended to go to sleep. She just lay down on Crystal's bed for a minute, to rest her poor feet . . .

When she opened her eyes it was night. Crystal stood at the door switching on the pink shaded lamp. "I musta dropped off for a minute," she yawned, struggling to a sitting position, and reaching for her shoes. "Did you have a good time, pet?"

"Good time!" Crystal panted, and burst into tears. "Good time! What chance have I got—out here in the sticks—miles from anything. You'll have to let me go to the city, that's all—I won't stay—"

"Pet, pet," Mrs. Haines leaned over, her corsets creaking, to get into her shoes. "The best home a girl ever had—"

"Ugh—this old museum—miles away—"

"An' McKevitt coming all the way from the city to see you, perfectly crazy about you—"

Crystal drew in her breath sharply. Her face was livid. "He was crazy about me—until she got at him—"

"She! What are you talking about, Crystal? Will Mama—for God's sake—"

"You—tell mama," Crystal mimicked bitterly, "and a lot of good it'll do you. You're a fool little old fixer, you are. Sleeping at the switch. Letting Daphne—"

"Daphne? You don't mean—"

"Yes, I do mean—your darling husband's brat—"

"But she—why, he wouldn't look at her when you—when you—"

"Wouldn't he?" Crystal laughed wildly. "You never can tell what a man will fall for. He did nothing but talk about her all day. Those eyes, those hair. I'm about crazy listening to him. He wants to bring another fellow and have a foursome, you know what that means. I'm through, I tell you—through! I knew she'd make trouble. I told you, I told you to keep her out of my way. I knew she'd spoil my whole life. He says she's a beauty—and he means it!"

Down went the gold head on the green coverlet. Her hiccoughing sobs shook the bed.

Mrs. Haines' heart almost stopped beating. Daphne . . . a beauty . . . she'd certainly never thought of her in that light. Still, if one liked that white-faced, slinky kind . . .

Why did the slowly opening door hold Crystal panic-stricken?

And Crystal crying her eyes out because Daphne, Daphne dared . . . "There, there," she soothed, patting the bowed golden head. "It'll be all right. Mama'll fix everything. Don't cry, dear, don't cry. It'll spoil your pretty eyes—"

Crystal's sobs grew fainter. Stopped altogether. She lay very quiet on the green coverlet stained with her tears.

Mrs. Haines got up stiffly. Her small, piggy eyes were hard.

CHAPTER TWO

IT was the most heavenly morning.

Different from all the other mornings. Brighter, sweeter, more freshly drenched in dew. The very birds praised it. The blossom laden trees sent up their fragrance, incense to the saving. The whole world was different, Daphne knew that before she had really opened her eyes. Different because of yesterday.

She sat up bed, the funny little iron bed she had ever since she was a child and which had been sorrowfully white, pink, a terrible blue that didn't look at all like the color on the paint catalogue, and was now white again with a bit of the blue showing through. The second Mrs. Haines, who was "doing over" the old house bit by bit, had been intending "to get at" Daphne's room for six months, but as yet she hadn't and Daphne didn't care. She liked it shabby and bare because it seemed more like home . . . like . . . like when Mother was alive . . .

But this was a happy morning. Ralph . . . Ralph McKevitt. She had only to shut her eyes to rapture again all the dreams of yesterday. Ralph talking to her, stopping her in the orchard, looking into her face and saying, "Why—you're beautiful!" He'd said that to her—Daphne—whom nobody had ever found beautiful before. And if he said that the first time he saw her, the next time he might . . . he might say anything . . . why he might take her out some time, instead of Crystal.

Crystal shouldn't care, she had so many . . . I'll ask Father for a new dress, and I'll borrow a little of Crystal's lip salve, and the next time he comes I'll be worth looking at. I'll be out on the porch—no, I won't—I'll be in the orchard again, and he'll stop again, and he'll say . . ." Ralph looking down at her again under the blossoms. Ralph putting his hands on her shoulders again. Kissing her maybe, loving her . . .

With a little sigh of sheer happiness she reached under the pillow for the creased and yellowed bit of newspaper that was her best picture of him. It wasn't very clear, it might have been any boy in football clothes, with broad shoulders, and fair, tousled hair. But she knew it was Ralph. She had it lovingly against her cheek, and sank back into the pillows . . . just for a minute. . . .

When she opened her eyes again the bright sun was pouring in the windows, water was roaring in the bathroom at the end of the hall—it was late!

"Oh—and I meant to get up early!"

Mama was getting breakfast already. Daphne could hear her rattling the stove lids downstairs. Funny she didn't call her, she always did . . .

Hastily she sprang into her clothes, laid the best picture of Ralph with the others, equally yellowed and creased, in the pink candy box hidden under her silk slip in the bottom bureau drawer.

"Why didn't you call me?" she cried, as she ran into the kitchen five minutes later. "I just woke up!"

Mrs. Haines, frying bacon and eggs at the range, didn't look up but her red face turned a shade redder and she said in a high, quivering voice, "Because I'm tired waiting you. I've done my best. Nobody can say I didn't do all I could, But I'm through. I'm through—" Her voice broke.

"But Mama—I don't understand."

"All right. I'm not asking anything from you. I don't want any help. My head's splitting and Crystal's sick, but never mind—"

"But I want to help—please let me. What's the matter with Crystal? Please let me finish getting breakfast!" Daphne tried to take the long handled fork out of her stepmother's hands, but Mrs. Haines pushed her away angrily. A hard, sharp push, almost a slap.

There was nothing else to do, the toast was made, the table in one corner of the big kitchen—they ate always in the kitchen except when there was company—was laid with the red and white checked tablecloth and the rosebud pattern dishes that had been Mother's best. They came with soap coupons.

"She's been having a fight with Crystal," Daphne thought, without much rancor. The mysterious arrangements which went on behind closed doors between Mrs. Haines and her daughter always ended in red eyes and tantrums, and she had learned to take them the way the orchard-ists take unseasonal rain and wind, calmly to be borne with.

Oh well! It was too nice a day to spoil. Daphne went and stood at the kitchen door, waiting for the storm to blow over. From the doorway you could see the orchard that melted into the Turner's orchard, and the Norton's beyond. One great sea of foamy white blossoms, a bridal bouquet for a lady giant, that spread the length of the great valley, and reached to the edge of the purple hills . . . so lovely . . . so lovely . . .

"For God's sake shut the door!" Mrs. Haines screamed in her ear. "Flies coming in. I've got enough to do without chasing flies—I—"

"But I've got the screen door shut!" Daphne cried indignantly. "There aren't any coming in. You—you make me sick!"

"Is that the way you talk to your mother?" And there was Father, pompous and irritable with a before-breakfast grouch. "My gush, Daphne. And the milk. And in the future, be a little more considerate—"

"Never mind," Mrs. Haines broke in tearfully. "I'm used to it. I don't expect anything different. I can bear it. I'm only a stepmother. It's only when she turns on Crystal that it hurts. Then—" She clutched her side dramatically, "then a knife turns in me. To think that after all these years—so much love—" She sank into a chair, and buried her face in her hands.

Instantly Father was bending over her, his short, thick arms around her fat neck. "Adelina—darling—you aren't well. Last night—I know you weren't—you mustn't worry so—you mustn't—"

The eggs were burning. Daphne swept them off the fire, her young mouth set in a hard, red line. This was worse than the fighting. Intending to Father talk that way, with that queer throb in his voice and his eyes so bright and beseeching, as if he were going to cry. . . .

"I'll thank you to keep a civil tongue in your head!" he roared at her suddenly. "Your mother's a sick woman. Didn't close her eyes all night. You might at least have helped get breakfast. Now pass me the bread. And the butter—"

Daphne pushed them toward him. "I did want to help—she wouldn't let me—"

"Shoo—the cat's mother," Mrs. Haines murmured, adding cream to her coffee, and stirring it elegantly, her little finger crooked.

"You know I wanted to help!" Daphne burst out bitterly. "And I don't know why you didn't let me, I neither you usually do, I—I don't know what's the matter with everybody. Oh I don't know what's going to become of me—I don't—I don't—"

They let her rush out of the kitchen, down the back stairs, into the yard.

Old Mr. Haines went on eating stolidly. Two eggs. Four slices of bacon. Three pieces of bread. His wife watched him, sipping her coffee, saying nothing.

When he had finished she came over and stood beside him, drew his round gray head, with the dry thin hair and the bald spot on the top back against her soft bosom. "You eat now it for," she whispered. "How she talks to me. When I try so hard—"

"Poor little woman." He patted her hand fatuously. "You're too sensitive. Let her alone, that's all. You can't do anything with that young one—regular wild cat. Got that from her mother." He stood up with a little grunt—he felt his years in the morning—fifty-eight old, getting old . . .

"When I think of what you must have suffered with her mother. Well, I'm quick. I saw it the first time I set eyes on her, I said, 'There's a cold one,' I said, 'and a hard one. She don't understand that word—"

"Bless you, Adelina, dear you!" Old Man Haines' eyes were misty.

"Well, no use crying over spilt milk," Mrs Adelina cut in hastily, pulling away her hand and starting to stack the dishes briskly. "By the way, Abner, I want to give a few little parties for Crystal this summer. We ought to let her have young folks, and you enjoy them too, and the way the young girls take to you—" She laughed and poked him archly in the ribs—"You old sheik, you!"

"Well, you don't have to worry, Adelina, I'll always be true to you, little woman—always—"

She drew away again, sharply. "If you're going to San Jose you'll have to hurry, you'll have to get along—"

"I know." He moved away, reluctantly. Reached for his hat, hanging on the hook behind the door.

"And I'll have to get a few things for the house!" she called after him. "And a few things for Crystal—she's gotta look as well as the others, poor kid—"

"Oh, that's all right," the old man mumbled benevolently. "I want you to be happy, Adelina. Adelina, you are happy with me? You don't think I'm just an old man, Adelina—with money?"

For a moment his eyes seemed to search hers, suspiciously, but she kissed him roundly and wagged a coquettish finger at him. "Silly boy!"

So he went away, content.

* * *

Daphne was washing the breakfast dishes, hurrying because it was almost school time. The sleeves of her white middy blouse were rolled up, disclosing her slender, milk white arms.

"Not really runaway at all," Mrs. Haines thought bitterly, sipping her third cup of coffee at the kitchen table.

Daphne's mouth was hard, but her eyes were dark and dreaming. "Mooning over McKevitt," the stepmother thought shrewdly. "Planning when she's going to see him again—and a lot of good that's going to do you, Miss!" A spasm of pain passed over her large red face. What if she couldn't prevent McKevitt from choosing Daphne . . . what if he'd really lost interest in Crystal already . . .

With mounting fear she studied the unconscious girl at the sink. Her small, pale eyes glittered, her lips moved, she was talking to herself, a habit she had formed in the long, lonely days when she sat and waited for other women, and the longer, more lonely nights when she sat hunched over the lamp, waiting for Crystal, working for Crystal, her girl, her baby girl, her pretty one, who must have the right clothes, meet the right people, marry the right man . . . McKevitt . . .

Clothes. And looks. On these two things she had pinned her faith, On them her high ambitions had been built. By them she had achieved the place she now occupied, in the sun.

Wasn't it her own looks, her own generous curves, her carefully "touched up" yellow hair that had attracted Old Man Haines in the first place, made him desire her even before his thin, dark-eyed wife was dead? That had turned the stingiest well-to-do orchardist in Santa Clara County into a doddering, old fool?

She stole another look at Daphne—at her flawless skin, her dark, satiny hair . . . oh, what a fool not to see it before . . .

"That'll be about enough from you!" she cried suddenly, getting to her feet.

CHAPTER 3

"TIAPTLL be about enough from you!"

Seven words, and they marked the end of Daphne as a daughter of the house. There was even a tinge of regret in Adelina Haines' decision. So she might have felt at beheading a pet chicken to make a nourishing broth for Crystal. It was too bad in a way, but it had to be done.

It was astonishingly easy. Old Man Haines didn't even notice what was happening, and Daphne was too proud to protest.

"Crystal is having company tonight, I hope you'll let her have the living room, Daphne. You can read upstairs, can't you?"

Or a little ridicule. "I hope you didn't dress up because Crystal is expecting a few friends. Mercy what a long face! I believe the child did . . . Crystal, will you look at her black! Maybe there's some young man . . . I'll bet it's Ralph McKevitt—there—I knew it!—look at her, borack if I ever saw a love sick girl—Shame on you, Daphne.

"I always smile to Crystal, and I'll say the same to you as if you was my girl. I always said, 'Don't force yourself where you aren't wanted!' Now you hide your time, an' when Crystal and a certain party announce their engagement then we'll have a real big party an' you can invite some of your friends, and—"

But Daphne never waited for the promise. She fled to her room to read or weep. Mrs. Haines didn't know and didn't care which.

"I've lost him," Daphne thought, and the hot tears would rush to her eyes to be whisked away before they were shed. And then, honestly, "No, I haven't, cause I never had him. He took one look at me, and then forgot all about me. I . . . I was making believe . . ."

Making believe . . . Daphne's weakness . . . Comforting, but foolish. But she wasn't going to make believe any more, not she. Leave that for children, she was almost 18. The nights when there was music and dancing downstairs were good, you could be undisturbed to plan . . . to plan . . . ways . . . ways of getting the things you wanted out of life. Freedom, and beauty, and love. Romance. Adventure.

Perhaps some day the stage, or pictures . . . Juliet, like Jane Cowl. But these things wouldn't come in a minute. You'd have to have something else, some way to earn a living if you weren't clever at cooking for the money—like Mama and Crystal.

So she'd sharpen her pencil to a needle like point and copy the words-signs in the shorthand book, over and over, over and over. Finish the business course at High—that was the first thing . . . and then . . . and then . . .

Daphne wasn't so ill prepared for the world as she looked.

* * *

Boxes came from the city. Round ones with names like "Julie" or "Madame Armandt" in scrawling script on their fat primrose or mauve sides, bulging tissue-swathed hats. Long striped ones marked "Special delivery" or "Rush" which meant something crushable inside, a chiffon dance frock, an imported coat.

There were literally no end to them. A jade green georgette for Crystal meant a black lace for Adelina. "I don't want you to be ashamed of me. I want you to be proud of your wife," she'd tell the old man. And he'd beam. "I love to see you happy, Adelina. If you want anything, you just ask—"

Easy! Like taking candy from a child. Better, far better than she had ever dared to hope.

Crystal was happy too. Things were going gorgeously. Literally more pictures than she had time for. McKevitt came once a week, and on one of her shopping trips to San Francisco she met somebody else, Avery Woodward, who lived in a shack on Telegraph Hill, and wrote verse, and painted. She didn't tell her mother about him, but the secret excitement dyed her cheeks scarlet.

She weighed the two men, one against the other. Her laughter rose high and clear, like tinkling glass. She flattered Old Man Haines, and there were six weeks when she and her mother didn't have a cross word.

Adeline's little finger was a marvel of elegance as she poised from the new silver teapot, "Cream, or lemon?" She was proud of her society manner. Proud of what she was accomplishing with the old man, too. Why if he continued to improve, soon they wouldn't have to be ashamed of him at all.

She had got him to shave off the walrus whiskers, to exchange the thick gold watch chain for one of finest platinum, and wonder of wonders to stop talking about the butcher business. "Talk orchards instead—it's more genteel, besides, you don't do the butcher business now, Abner—"

"All right, all right. Anything to please the ladies!"

She should have stopped there, but she was wound up, she couldn't stop. The country club over at the Springs—everybody who was anybody belonged. And golf would do wonders for him—wonders—

So she accomplished that too. She actually saw her husband, in knickers, on the green with Tuhon, the banker, and that stuck-up Englishman, Turner, and Hitchcock, the wholesale grocer. Even Crystal was pleased. "He looks almost human now!" she said.

Turner, the stuck-up neighbor was astonished. He couldn't get over the change in Old Man Haines. He looked almost young. "How old are you anyway, Haines?" he asked one day.

"Sixty-six—getting along, Turner, getting along."

"Sixty-six! You don't mean it. . . why man, you could pass for 50!"

Old Man Haines came home in high spirits. "Said I could pass for 50," he told Adelina.

"Oh sure, you got years and years before you'll be old," she said absently. She was getting ready to go into San Francisco on another shopping tour with Crystal.

After she had gone there was no one for him to talk to. Except Daphne, and Old Man Haines didn't want to talk to Daphne. He had caught a look in her eye lately . . . seeming . . . as if he might have done some of this for Martha . . . her mother.

He didn't want to talk to Daphne, so he sat and mused in the warm summer darkness instead. Young. He was still young. Years and years ahead. Years to be happy with Adelina . . .

And then it came to him—his money wouldn't last years! It . . . was going fast now . . . have to call a halt . . .

He went inside and did some figuring. He worked most of the night. In the morning he went to see Tuhon, at the bank.

* * *

It was on a Wednesday morning that Mrs. Haines and Crystal got back. A hot day, full of white, glaring sun, and dry, spicy smelling dust, swept up from the unpaved orchard road. Crystal, triumphant and fresh as a daisy, ran ahead.

"Daphne, any mail? Not a bit? Listen, I got the most gorgeous evening wrap—gold brocade. Wait till you see it. Where's Pa? Playing golf? Hope he's in good humor, it cost enough—"

Mrs. Haines followed, fallen arches sagging in pumps that were just a shade too narrow, blue foulard dress and white kid gloves darkly stained with perspiration.

"Mercy it's hot! Pretty soft for you sitting on the porch reading a book. I don't know why the schools have these long vacations . . . the whole summer . . . where's your father?"

In the dining room. He's been working with his check books and things all morning, and all last night. How—he doesn't seem very well—"

"Check books!" Mrs. Haines wheezed.

Without stopping to powder her shining nose or remove the tight hat that was making a cruel red line around her aching head, she made for the dining room. "Abner, what does this mean—"

He looked up from the table where he was working, swept a thick, hairy wrist across his tired old eyes. "Adeline, I—I just have been crazy. Didn't stop to realize how the money was going. I'm not a rich man, Adelina. I wish I was—I—"

Stowaway on Zeppelin Receives Many Offers of Jobs in U. S. and Germany

Berlin Oct. 31—Clarence Terhune the 19-year-old St Louis adventurer who stowed away on the Graf Zeppelin thus opening the way to international limelight and a good job received all kinds of offers awaiting him when the Graf reaches Friedrichshafen.

America and Germany are already competing for the young man. Among the offers some are from music hall managers who will gladly pay for a personal appearance. Others are from business concerns which will gladly go to America.

The manager of the Hagenbeck Animal Show of Hamburg tried to steal a march on his rivals by sending a diplomatic representative on board the Zeppelin. He offered the American the chance of his own life time if he would remain with the show at his own terms. It is believed that Americans will soon enter Germany in search of jobs. There are at present in Germany [illegible] who will be glad to go to work.

All Germany is interested in the sensational exploit of the 19-year-old youth and it is certain to be the center of attraction when he lands.

To the Voters of Morrow County

It has been impossible for me to see all the voters personally in Morrow County and I am asking for a second term for Commissioner If my record has been such as to deserve your support I am not afraid of my record nor ashamed of it and I ask an inspection of the record of the Commissioners Journal to see if I have given Morrow County the best administration I could since I have been Commissioner

No doubt I have done a few things that some would not approve of and may be I have done a few things that are pleasing to you I have not voted to please any individual but have given the best I have to protect Morrow County and its interests now do I claim that I have not made some mistakes

I have always tried to work to the tax payers interest also spent a great deal of time and some of my own money to look after the poor of Morrow County and have never tried to do an injustice to the working class and if re elected will try to carry out the same policies as I have in the term I am just about to finish

I am against the big concerns and the political factions that try to gull the tax payers out of their money, and have always tried in the county's business as in my own to make a dollar go as far as possible The records will show that I have never sidestepped any issue that came up in our office

I wish at this time to thank all who have given me their support in the past in any way and will also thank you for your support on November 6th

Bears Launch Attack Against Industrial Favorites

PRES TAKE DROP FROM 3-8 POINTS

Bas Force Call Loan Rate Up to Eight Per Cent

PIG IRON UP

But Indifferent to Trend of Stocks on Wall Street

BY W. S. COUSINS
N. S. Financial Editor

N. York, Oct. 31.—Bears in the stockmarket took advantage of the indecision of the bulls and the monend squeeze in the money market to launch an attack against the mutrial stock favorites, and succeeded in marking prices downward from 3 points in a number of the well known shares. The indifference of the bulls was believed to be a natural effect of pre-election uneasiness, though Wall Street has always had very firm convictions as to the probable result of the poll next Tuesday.

The call loan rate returned to eight per cent in reflection of the corralling of funds in the banks against the November interest and dividend settlements, which will aggregate about $350,000,000 this year. Over the long range Wall Street looks for an easier money market and was therefore not visibly ruffled by the high call rate.

Impending purchases of railroad equipment and seasonal orders for rails, a sustained demand for pig iron at higher prices and further signs of strength in finished steel materials were reported in the Iron Age's weekly summary of the steel trade.

Steel production holds to 80 per cent of mill capacity and the pig iron output has reached a record for the year. The Iron Age's composite price for finished steel has advanced to $2.369 a pound, the highest since June, 1927.

Oil and copper industries made favorable reports, though the decline in prices of wholesale gasoline was in contrast to recent developments in the industry.

Most of the high-priced industrial stocks moved downward in moderate selling pressure which indicated plainly a comparatively small amount of stock for sale.

On his departure from Hull, Eng., recently, Rev. P. Woodman was presented a case of pipes by customers of a saloon outside of which he had held religious services.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

The last of the new potatoes disappeared from the produce markets of the city this morning and all future stocks of potatoes will be obtained by drawing upon supplies stored in warehouses, retailers reported this morning.

Home-grown celery is expected to sing its swan song and pass from the vegetable stands of Marion some time today or Thursday. Small stocks of home-grown celery still remain in markets here, but they are fast dwindling and are not expected to last through Thursday. Future supplies of celery will be shipped in from New York state, according to local vegetable dealers.

Two price changes were reported by local retailers here this morning. Both variations in quotations were in those given on vegetables and both were decreases in price.

New white silver skin onions formerly selling at 10 cents a pound fell to four pounds for 25 cents this morning. Spinach with its old price set at 20 cents a pound, went down to 15 cents a pound today.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

Chicago, Oct. 31—Grains closed weak and lower on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Wheat was firm and higher early on buying by commission houses with Eastern and Northwest connections only to weaken later on selling by locals. Buying against bids finally checked the decline, but the market showed little rallying power. Trade was rather light and that fact contributed to bearish sentiment. Export demand was again moderate. Foreign news was bearish. Liverpool closed ½@¾d lower and Buenos Aires was ¾@1¾c down at midseason. Seeding of Winter wheat in Kansas practically completed. Broomhall estimates Argentine and Australia surplus at 258,000,000 bu based on present condition. Weather conditions in the Canadian Northwest generally favorable and the Southwest had more beneficial rains.

At the close wheat was 1¼@1⅜c lower; corn ¾@⅞c down; oats ⅝@¾c lower; rye 1@1⅛c down. Winnipeg futures were ⅞@1⅛c lower.

Cash Wheat Steady

The cash wheat market was steady to easy. The trading basis was unchanged. No fresh export business was reported in wheat. Local shipping sales were 10,000 bu and there were sales of 75,000 bu made to go to store. Warehouse receipts were canceled for the shipment of 32,115 bu No. 1 northern. The Canadian visible supply of wheat for the week increased 7,493,000 bu, the total now being 63,383,000 bu, against 24,740,000 bu a year ago. Bradstreet's report on world's available supply for the week increased 10,176,000 bu, the total now being 345,558,000 bu, against 272,767,000 bu last year. Primary receipts were 1,585,000 bu, against 2,360,000 bu last week and 2,677,000 bu a year ago.

Moderate Corn Trade

Trade in corn was again moderate with the market influenced by the action of wheat. Prices held within a narrow range. Commission houses were fair buyers at times. Selling was mostly by locals and on realizing orders. Weather conditions over the belt mainly favorable, but the forecast is for unsettled around nearby territory. No fresh export business was reported. Country offerings to arrive fair. Cash demand was fairly active, with the trading basis unchanged to 2c lower. Bradstreet's report on world's available supply for the week decreased 226,000 bu, the total now being 1,567,000 bu.

Cotton

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

Chicago, Oct. 31—Grains closed weak and lower on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Wheat was firm and higher early on buying by commission houses with Eastern and Northwest connections only to weaken later on selling by locals. Buying against bids finally checked the decline, but the market showed little rallying power. Trade was rather light and that fact contributed to bearish sentiment. Export demand was again moderate. Foreign news was bearish. Liverpool closed ½@¾d lower and Buenos Aires was ¾@1¾c down at midseason. Seeding of Winter wheat in Kansas practically completed. Broomhall estimates Argentine and Australia surplus at 258,000,000 bu based on present condition. Weather conditions in the Canadian Northwest generally favorable and the Southwest had more beneficial rains.

At the close wheat was 1¼@1⅜c lower; corn ¾@⅞c down; oats ⅝@¾c lower; rye 1@1⅛c down. Winnipeg futures were ⅞@1⅛c lower.

Cash Wheat Steady

The cash wheat market was steady to easy. The trading basis was unchanged. No fresh export business was reported in wheat. Local shipping sales were 10,000 bu and there were sales of 75,000 bu made to go to store. Warehouse receipts were canceled for the shipment of 32,115 bu No. 1 northern. The Canadian visible supply of wheat for the week increased 7,493,000 bu, the total now being 63,383,000 bu, against 24,740,000 bu a year ago. Bradstreet's report on world's available supply for the week increased 10,176,000 bu, the total now being 345,558,000 bu, against 272,767,000 bu last year. Primary receipts were 1,585,000 bu, against 2,360,000 bu last week and 2,677,000 bu a year ago.

Moderate Corn Trade

Trade in corn was again moderate with the market influenced by the action of wheat. Prices held within a narrow range. Commission houses were fair buyers at times. Selling was mostly by locals and on realizing orders. Weather conditions over the belt mainly favorable, but the forecast is for unsettled around nearby territory. No fresh export business was reported. Country offerings to arrive fair. Cash demand was fairly active, with the trading basis unchanged to 2c lower. Bradstreet's report on world's available supply for the week decreased 226,000 bu, the total now being 1,567,000 bu.

Bears Launch Attack Against Industrial Favorites

PRICES TAKE DROP FROM 3-8 POINTS

Banks Force Call Loan Rate Up to Eight Per Cent

PIG IRON UP

Bulls Indifferent to Trend of Stocks on Wall Street

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

New York, Oct. 31—Bears in the stock market took advantage of the indisposition of the bulls and the money-bend squeeze in the money market today to launch an attack against the industrial stock favorites, and succeeded in marking prices downward from 3-8 points in a number of the well-known shares. The indifference of the bulls was believed to be a natural effect of pre-election nervousness, though Wall Street has always had very firm convictions as to the probable result of the poll next Tuesday.

The call loan rate returned to eight per cent in reflection of the corralling of funds in the banks against the November interest and dividend settlements, which will aggregate about $350,000,000 this year. Over the long range Wall Street looks for an easier money market and was therefore not visibly ruffled by the high call rate.

Impending purchases of railroad equipment and seasonal orders for rails, a sustained demand for pig iron at higher prices and further signs of strength in finished steel materials were reported in the Iron Age's weekly summary of the steel trade.

Steel production holds to 80 per cent of mill capacity and the pig iron output has reached a record for the year. The Iron Age's composite price for finished steel has advanced to $2.369 a pound, the highest since June, 1927.

Oil and copper industries made favorable reports, though the decline in prices of wholesale gasoline was in contrast to recent developments in the industry.

Most of the high priced industrial stocks moved downward in moderate selling pressure, which indicated plainly a comparatively small amount of stock for sale.

On his departure from Hull, Eng., recently, Rev. F. Woodman was presented a case of pipes by customers of a saloon outside of which he had held religious services.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

The last of the new potatoes disappeared from the produce markets of the city this morning and all future stocks of potatoes will be obtained by drawing upon supplies stored in warehouses, retailers reported this morning.

Home-grown celery is expected to sing its swan song and pass from the vegetable stands of Marion some time today or Thursday. Small stocks of home-grown celery still remain in markets here, but they are fast dwindling and are not expected to last through Thursday. Future supplies of celery will be shipped in from New York state, according to local vegetable dealers.

Two price changes were reported by local retailers here this morning. Both variations in quotations were in those given on vegetables and both were decreases in price.

New white silver skin onions formerly selling at 10 cents a pound fell to four pounds for 25 cents this morning. Spinach with its old price set at 20 cents a pound, went down to 15 cents a pound today.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

Chicago, Oct. 31—Grains closed weak and lower on the Chicago Board of Trade today. Wheat was firm and higher early on buying by commission houses with Eastern and Northwest connections only to weaken later on selling by locals. Buying against bids finally checked the decline, but the market showed little rallying power. Trade was rather light and that fact contributed to bearish sentiment. Export demand was again moderate. Foreign news was bearish. Liverpool closed 1¼d lower and Buenos Aires was ¼@⅝c down at midsession. Seeding of Winter wheat in Kansas practically completed. Broomhall estimates Argentine and Australia surplus at 285,000,000 bu based on present condition. Weather conditions in the Canadian Northwest generally favorable and the Southwest had some beneficial rains.

At the close wheat was 1¾@1⅞c lower; corn 2@2½c down; oats ¾@⅞c lower; rye 1@1¼c down. Winnipeg futures were 1¾@1⅝c lower.

Cash Wheat Steady

The cash wheat market was steady to easy. The trading basis was unchanged. No fresh export business was reported in wheat. Local shipping sales were 10,000 bu and there were sales of 75,000 bu made to go to store. Warehouse receipts were canceled for the shipment of 32,115 bu No. 1 northern. The Canadian visible supply of wheat for the week increased 7,198,000 bu, the total now being 65,352,000 bu, against 24,716,000 bu a year ago. Bradstreet's report on world's available supply for the week increased 10,176,000 bu, the total now being 315,559,000 bu, against 222,737,000 bu last year. Primary receipts were 1,885,000 bu, against 2,360,000 bu last week and 2,075,000 bu a year ago.

Moderate Corn Trade

Trade in corn was again moderate with the market influenced by the action of wheat. Prices held within a narrow range. Commission houses were fair buyers at times. Selling was mostly by locals and on resting orders. Weather conditions over the belt mainly favorable, but the forecast is for unsettled around nearby territory. No fresh export business was reported. Country offerings to arrive fair. Cash demand was fairly active, with the trading basis unchanged to 2c lower. Bradstreet's report on world's available supply for the week decreased 926,000 bu, the total now being 1,507,000 bu.

Cotton

New York, Oct. 31—Cotton prices recovered eight to 12 points at the opening today. December sold at 19.26c, January 19.11c, March 19.31c, May 19.29c and July 19.12c.

SMITH PUTS FINAL TOUCHES ON TALK

Newark Will Be Last Appearance Outside New York

New York Oct 31—Behind carefully guarded doors at the Biltmore hotel Gov Al Smith today was putting the final touches on the speech he will deliver tonight at Newark in his last appearance of the campaign outside his own New York.

Smith is calmly confident of the outcome. With nearly 12,000 miles of campaigning behind him, marked by demonstrations the like of which never before have been witnessed in a presidential campaign, the governor feels the tide is fast drifting his way and that by next Tuesday the election will be in the bag for the Democrats.

He will go to New Jersey confident he can win the state's 18 electoral votes. Democratic leaders of New Jersey, who privately have admitted during the last 10 days that they were a little worried over the outlook for the national ticket, now feel that Smith's appearance in Newark tonight will be the means of putting the state in the Democratic column.

Labor prohibition and probably an other ship scandal inheritance are expected to be the high spots in Smith's speech at Newark.
